Mississippi State Traditions

The Cowbell

The Cowbell is the ultimate symbol of Mississippi State pride. Legend has it that a wandering jersey cow became a good luck charm after strolling onto the field during a victorious home football game. Later, students started bringing the cow's bell for luck and the tradition continues today.

Bully

Bully, an English Bulldog, is the official mascot of MSU. He can be found cheering on the Bulldogs all across campus along with his costume-clad counterpart, also named Bully.

Maroon & White

The Maroon and White tradition dates back over a century to the very first football game ever played by the school's student-athletes on November 15, 1895, and current students still wear their Maroon and White with pride. Be sure to listen for the Maroon and White cheer on game day.

The Drill Field

Located at the center of the MSU Campus, the Drill Field is a popular gathering place for students. When Mississippi A&M was founded in 1878, it was founded as a land-grant institution. Early ROTC cadets would have morning and evening drills in this area of campus, which earned it the name "Drill Field."

The Junction

The Junction is the heart of Bulldog tailgating. The Bulldog family gathers here in excitement on game day to watch the team enter the stadium during the Dawg Walk, to hear the Famous Maroon Band warm up, and to fill up on their favorite tasty tailgating treats.

Maroon Fridays

The Bulldog family shows off our pride and passion for MSU by wearing maroon on campus, at home, at work, and around the world every Friday, 52 weeks a year.

Hail State Fight Song

Hail State was penned as the Mississippi State fight song in the 1930s and is still chanted proudly in the land of Maroon and White today!

Hail dear ol' State!
Fight for that victory today.
Hit that line and tote that ball,
Cross the goal before you fall!
And then we'll yell, yell, yell,
For dear ol' State we'll yell like H-E-L-L!
Fight for Mis-sis-sip-pi State,
Win that game today!

Visit the Office of Admissions & Scholarships website for more information on the university's traditions.

Tornado

Tornado Watch: conditions are favorable for tornadoes to develop.
Tornado Warning: a tornado has been sighted or indicated by radar.

When you hear a siren, it is imperative to seek shelter in the nearest building. Do not go to your vehicle during a tornado siren. Vehicles do not provide adequate shelter, and roadways need to be kept clear for use by police and emergency responders. Instead, seek shelter on the bottom floor of a building. If possible, choose a basement or interior hallway. Clear all classrooms and residential rooms. Secure all laboratories to include shutting off gas burners and equipment that could cause additional health and safety concerns. When a tornado approaches, you should assume a kneeling position facing the wall and cover your head with your arms. Keep away from doors and windows. The MSU Crisis Action Team will monitor the situation and give the all clear as soon as conditions are safe. Do not leave the shelter until the "all clear" has been given. For other severe weather conditions, monitor the notification methods mentioned above.

Maroon Alert

Maroon Alert is a comprehensive array of communication channels to announce that emergency conditions are developing. One or all of these channels including campus e-mail, media, loudspeaker notifications, and text messages may be used when any situation occurs. To know the Maroon Alert channels, visit the website below. In an emergency situation, a blue banner at the top usually provides advisory information; a yellow banner, that a more serious condition or a declared campus emergency is taking place. Other information may be found on the page's announcements section. During an active emergency, information also is updated on the MSU emergency webpage and is accessible by smartphones. Additionally, social media messages may be posted to the official Maroon Alert Twitter and Facebook feeds.

Students are encouraged to use the Maroon Alert Text Messages channel, which is used only for situations of imminent risk requiring action. Due to the large volume of users, delivery may take as long as 15 minutes. To receive cell-phone Maroon Alert text messages, a student must provide a phone number to the myState system in the following manner:

1. Log in to myState, my.msstate.edu
2. Click on the "Banner" tab
3. Under "Person Information," click on "Update Your Directory and Address Information"
4. Enter a cell phone number in the "Maroon Alert" cell phone number field
5. Click on "Update/Verify Directory Information" to save this information

Banking

In the U.S., check writing, Automated Teller Machine (ATM), debit or credit cards, and online banking are common ways to make purchases and pay bills. When you have money transferred or wired from your country, be prepared that it might take a few days or weeks before you can access the money. Make sure to communicate with the banking service that you use about waiting time and cost.

Checking and Savings Accounts

Students are encouraged to open a checking account to manage their own money and pay bills including rent and utilities. Most checking accounts come with an ATM / Debit card so that you can withdraw money from your account and use it for purchases. Checks are also commonly used at retail shops for housing although you will need to show some form of photo I.D. such as a passport or driver's license. If you have a job on campus, you can request your salary to be directly deposited to your checking account. Note that debit cards usually have credit card logos (Visa and MasterCard) and can function like a credit card for purchases. However, the payment is drawn from your checking account directly. Some banks have a checking and savings account service for students, so ask local banks what option is the best for you when you visit there.

Credit Cards

If you have no credit history in the U.S., it may be difficult to obtain a credit card. You can establish a credit history by obtaining a "Secure Credit Card" which will require you to deposit money for its usage. Within a few months of using the Secure Credit Card, you may be eligible for other credit cards. However you may need a Social Security Number to be eligible to apply.

Documents to Open a Bank Account

These are the documents that banks usually need to open a bank account for international students. However, required documents vary at each bank. Contact the bank where you want to open your account and make sure which documents you need to bring.

Cell Phones

In the U.S., there are two main types of cell phone services: monthly plans and prepaid plans. Since each cell phone provider has different plans, you should do research on options provided by different providers before making a decision.

Two-year Contract Plans

These plans offer monthly rates and low prices on new phones compared to prepaid plans. While the rates may be lower, canceling a contract early requires a large payment. To qualify for a contract plan, a cell phone provider will review the applicant's credit history. Since new international students do not have a Social Security Number or credit history in the U.S., the company may require a security deposit which is about $500.

Pay-As-You-Go or Prepaid Plans

Prepaid plans are easier for new international students to obtain because they do not require a Social Security Number or a credit history review. These "pay-as-you-go" plans use the same cell phone networks and offer the same services as contract plans do, but usually at higher prices. Benefits of these plans include no long-term contracts, security deposits, or penalties for cancellation.

Sim Card for Your Cell Phone from Your Country

The International Institute on campus will provide international students with a sim card that you can insert into your cell phone from your country. These sim cards offer various prepaid plans, and you can manage your account online to monitor your usage, buy add-ons, and much more. Please visit the link below for details.

Football

It is a good idea to replace the word football with “soccer” in your dictionary, if you already have not. The United States has a great soccer team, but the enthusiasm and excitement over American Football is one of a kind. The Fall semester is the College football season across the United States. Mississippi State University’s football team is part of the SEC and highly ranked. This Fall, MSU will host seven home football games on its campus. International students will witness students, staff, faculty, alumni, and fans across the United States getting together on campus to support and celebrate football festivities. Fans are mostly dressed in Maroon or White. The color to wear for each game is announced a few days before the game.

Holmes Cultural Diversity Center (HCDC)

The Holmes Cultural Diversity Center (HCDC) strives to enhance the college experience for all students at the university, no matter the race, culture, or creed. Over the decades, many students served by the center have come to consider it a “home away from home.” The center offers over 3,000 square feet of open space for students to study, relax, and hang out.

Through varied programs and services, HCDC staff members work to:

- Encourage, through sensitivity training and programming, the development of a climate in which all cultures, especially minority and international students, are appreciated as valued members of the campus community.
- Increase minority and international student enrollment and retention by assisting the university’s student recruitment and retention efforts.
- Encourage and assist minority and international students with their academic, career aspirations and social adjustments to life in higher education.
- Serve as liaisons between minority and international students and members of the faculty and administration.
